An archaeological excavation site showing a stone wall. A vertical marker with alternating red and white segments stands to the left of the wall. Two white markers with black numbers are placed on the ground: '502' is on the left, and '621' is on the right. The wall is built with large, irregular grey stones. The ground is a mix of dirt and smaller stones. In the background, more of the site is visible, including another marker with the number '500'.
